

Brittany Kosin is a dedicated advocate and community leader in Warwick Township, Pennsylvania. With a deep commitment to serving her neighbors, Brittany has spent years volunteering as a firefighter and working as an emergency room registered nurse. Her firsthand experience in emergency services and healthcare has fueled her passion for individual rights and limited government intervention.

Brittany's journey into public service began with her desire to see more transparency and accountability within local government. She believes that power should rest with the people and not be concentrated in the hands of a few. Her grassroots approach emphasizes the importance of listening to constituents and representing their needs without the influence of special interests.

Brittany's extensive training and education further strengthen her qualifications. She holds certifications in Vehicle Rescue, Firefighter 1, EMT-Basic, Urban Planning and Development, Emergency Management, and CAD, among others. Throughout her career, she has pursued higher education in both emergency management and nursing while maintaining her commitment to community service. Currently, she works as an Emergency Room Registered Nurse in the Lehigh Valley area, skillfully balancing her professional responsibilities with her role as a mother and community advocate.

In her previous run for Warwick Township Supervisor, Brittany distinguished herself as a candidate who prioritized community safety, fiscal responsibility, and personal freedom. Her platform includes advocating for property rights, reducing unnecessary regulations, and ensuring that local government remains transparent and accountable to the people it serves.

Now, running once again for Warwick Township Supervisor, Brittany is more determined than ever to bring a fresh, independent voice to local government. She aims to challenge the status quo and represent the true interests of Warwick Township residents. Her campaign is centered on the principles of personal responsibility and limited government—values that are essential for a thriving, free community.

Brittany Kosin is not just a candidate; she is a mother of three, a community volunteer, and a champion for the people of Warwick Township. Her dedication and unwavering commitment to ensuring the rights and freedoms of every resident make her the right choice for leadership.
